Library Users' Group

Following on from last year's strategic review of library services, and the input of library users to that review, we have now set up a permanent Library Users' Group to provide feedback on current library services and to help us plan for the future.

The Group's membership will comprise students, pupils, barristers and judges.

LexisNexis Special Offers

LexisNexis are offering discounts on their services to members of the Inner Temple who are sole practitioners or who work in chambers that do not currently subscribe to Lexis. The offers are valid until 15 December 2014. For more information click here.

Saturday Opening

One of the four Inn Libraries is open from 10.00 a.m. to 5.00 p.m. on each Saturday during the legal terms.

Online Legal Research Training

Last autumn we ran a series of three legal research training sessions for new pupils. The feedback from participants was very positive and we decided that we would continue to run the sessions twice a year, in spring and autumn, to coincide with the start of new pupillages. Details of the autumn 2014 programme can be found here.

To fit in with pupils' timetables, the sessions have taken place in the evenings or on Saturdays. Even so, we are aware that work schedules are often subject to last-minute changes and this means that pupils are sometimes obliged to drop out. We know also that pupils based outside London would find it difficult, if not impossible, to attend the sessions. So we decided to record them and make them available online in a webinar-style format, so that they can be viewed by pupils and students at any time.

Simon Hindley, Senior Library Assistant, is wired for sound

LexisNexis have allowed us to use their studio facilities for the recording and we have also been given a great deal of help, both in the studio and in the editing suite, by staff from The Streaming Company who produce webinars for LexisNexis. We are exceedingly grateful for their assistance, as this is our first experience of recording presentations and integrating video clips and slides. The Deputy Librarian and Senior Library Assistant rose to the challenge of recording very well, though there are of course some interesting out-takes.

Tracey Dennis, Deputy Librarian, and Simon Hindley, Senior Library Assistant, are ready to begin filming

The first training session, on the essentials of legal research, is now available online and we hope to record sessions two and three (on case law and legislation) by the end of the year.

If you would like to view session one, click here.

Aims of the session

This session will provide some useful tips to enable you to carry out legal research more effectively.

The following will be covered:

- Databases
- Abbreviations
- Acts - key points
- SIs - key points
- Cases - key points
- Legal definitions
- Halsbury's Laws
- Textbooks
- Journals
- Precedents/Forms
- Current awareness
- What to do if you cannot visit the Library in person

Student Evenings

The Library was represented at the Inn's introductory evenings for London and out of London students which took place on 23 and 26 September. As in previous years a range of Library guides and leaflets was on display and the Deputy Librarian and Senior Library Assistant were on hand to answer students' questions.

Tours

We are happy to arrange tours on a one-to-one basis for students, pupils, clerks or for any member of the Inn. Please email librarytours@innertemple.org.uk to arrange a suitable time. Alternatively a virtual tour is available for members unable to visit the Library in person.

Presentations to New Students

During September and October the Deputy Librarian together with Carolyn Rampling, a colleague from Lincoln's Inn Library, have been giving presentations to BPTC students at the City Law School, the University of Law and BPP Law School. The presentations covered the services that the Inn libraries offer to bar students and their aim is to encourage students to make use of library facilities and services at an early stage in their legal careers.

The sessions were very well attended; if you were not able to be there, however, the presentation is available on the Library's website.

Inner Temple Book Prize

The Inner Temple Book Prize was launched in 2008 as part of the celebrations marking the 400th anniversary of the grant of a Royal Charter to the Inner Temple and the Middle Temple. The Prize is intended to encourage and reward the writing of books which make an outstanding scholarly contribution to the understanding of the law as administered in England and Wales.

To mark the 800th Anniversary of Magna Carta, the Book Prize will be awarded again in 2015 and as before Wildy & Sons will be acting as sponsors. The Inn is offering two prizes, one of £12,000 and one of £5,000 for new authors. Click here for more details.

History Society Lectures

On 9 July, Master Baker gave the inaugural lecture to the Inner Temple History Society, on what he described as the “experimental” subject of Elizabethan marriage problems. The Tudor period saw a surprisingly large number of marriage cases. One of those discussed in the lecture involved a man who, having obtained a divorce on the grounds of incurable impotence, went on to have a child by his second wife. Numerous former benchers of the Inner Temple were mentioned in this highly engaging lecture, which was attended by an impressive audience, including visitors from the USA.

The second lecture will be given by the Master of the Temple, Robin Griffith-Jones, on 22 January 2015 at 6.00 p.m. His theme will be the fascinating and turbulent history of the Temple Church. The lecture will be followed by a Q&A session. An informal supper will also be provided for those who wish to continue the discussion afterwards. Tickets are available from the Treasury Office, via Eventbrite or by email from kpeters@innertemple.org.uk.

Bad Judges Book Launch

A book launch party for the late Master Graeme Williams’s Short book of bad judges (published by Wildy, Simmonds & Hill) took place on 3 October in the Parliament Chamber at the Inner Temple, and was well attended by family, friends and colleagues from the Inns.

The book, which is selling well worldwide, is available to buy from the Inner Temple Treasury Office and from Wildy & Sons.

Master Williams was a long-serving member of the Library Committee and a regular user of the Library; he will be greatly missed.

Word War One Display

One hundred years after the outbreak of the First World War, its impact still resonates, as people remember the conflict and the people involved and try to reconcile their differing responses to it. While the heroism and valour of the participants are celebrated, the political and national motives and reasons for the war are still intensely debated.

By way of an act of remembrance, the Temple Church is staging an exhibition about the lives of Inner and Middle Temple members who took part in the war. This runs until the end of 2014.

The Library has created a display focusing upon the creative and emotional responses of artists, poets and musicians who either took part in or were affected by the war, which have given rise to some of the most iconic, evocative, and loved, works of the twentieth century. Whether propaganda for the war, protest against it, or reflections of personal experiences, the creative output during and after the war was staggering, as was the impact on the artists themselves.

We have restricted ourselves to the arts in Britain, and have not been able to cover every element we would like to, but for those wishing to follow up their interest in this we have created a leaflet which contains a list of relevant events in London and some useful websites which we consider to be valuable resources.

New Guides

New editions of our Readers' Guide, Student Guide and Preparing for Pupillage: Legal Research Tips are available in the Library and for downloading from our website.

Peerage Claims added to the Catalogue

Michael Frost, Assistant Librarian, writes

The Library holds an extensive collection of peerage claims. I thought, having noticed that peerage claims did not appear to be well represented in publicly-available online catalogues, I would be doing a service to libraries generally, and to genealogical research, if I were to create full records for the items in our collection. I also thought, naively as it turned out, that as the collection was contained in 86 volumes the task would only take a matter weeks, or months at most, to complete. I was soon to discover that each volume might contain as many as fifteen or twenty items, often of only a few pages each, and in the event the project has taken, albeit off and on, the best part of two years.

given claim would be a time-consuming task. The collection survived the Second World War unscathed, but still uncatalogued.

The documents themselves include evidence (either verbatim proceedings relating to the evidence produced for the claimant(s), or transcripts of documentary evidence such as wills, pedigrees, coats of arms and extracts from public and private documents), claimants' petitions, attorney general's reports, reports from the House of Lords Committee for Privileges and reports from the Lord Chancellor.

I decided that each record should include (in addition to those elements strictly required by cataloguing rules) a uniform title entry containing the inferred title "Peerage claim" followed by the name of the peerage itself, in standardised form. This is because only in a relatively small proportion of the documents does the phrase actually occur on the title-page. Each record also has a "family as subject" entry for the peerage being claimed. And so whether an enquirer searches by title or subject, all the records relating to the same peerage can be located easily. All claimants' and counter-claimants' names are cross-referenced from family name to peerage name, where appropriate. This entailed a good deal of checking reference works, not least because of the aristocracy's fondness for "recycling" Christian names.

It is satisfying to have completed the task, but I will certainly be more circumspect in setting myself such targets in future.

BAILII: Onward and Upwards

Guy Tritton, Library Committee Member, writes

Everyone who reads this article will be familiar with BAILII, the online database of decisions of UK courts and tribunals that is free to all users. We all use it and for students and those who cannot afford commercial providers such as Westlaw and LexisNexis, it is a lifesaver. Yet, it does not happen by magic.

BAILII is reliant on and funded purely by donations from the legal community. These donations allow Joe Ury, the Executive Director, ably assisted by Sabrina Kavanagh, to ensure that its database is up to date with all the relevant UK, Irish, Channel Island and European decisions. This is no easy task. Surprisingly, the English courts lag behind some of their fellow Commonwealth jurisdictions when it comes to making available their decisions. Thus, the High Court has no central register of judgments. Joe is reliant on the goodwill of judges' clerks to forward judgments to him.

Those who do use commercial providers will know that the subscription costs rise ever higher. They have little competition and can afford to keep raising their prices. Yet, there is no reason why BAILII cannot provide a credible alternative whilst adhering to its principles of being free for all.

Together with Joe and Sabrina, a subcommittee of the Inner Temple Library Committee has been looking at ways to improve the functionality of BAILII so as to provide those features that we all like in the commercial providers' offerings. For instance, market research shows that when people peruse a decision, they find features such as a list of authorities cited in the decision and authorities that cite the decision to be of great value. Suggestions and recommendations for improving the functionality of BAILII are now under consideration.

There are other ways to expand the usefulness of BAILII, although they will cost money. For instance, everyone appreciates case summaries but BAILII cannot afford to commission people to write these. Accordingly, on behalf of BAILII, I am looking into the possibility of asking selected chambers to take responsibility for cases falling within their speciality field(s) and, in return for publicity, to be responsible for writing case summaries on those decisions they consider important.

Also, most legal blogs, when citing a case, will provide a citation which hyperlinks to the decision on BAILII. Another idea I am looking into is getting vetted legal bloggers to provide reverse hyperlinks from the BAILII authority to their blogs.

Finally, the feasibility of getting authors who write legal articles on a decision which appears on BAILII to post the article and its publication details against the details of that decision is being explored. All of this is intended to enrich the BAILII experience and provide real value to its users. If you have any other ideas for BAILII, please let me know at gtritton@hogarthchambers.com.

Unsurprisingly, these improvements will require funds to be raised. BAILII is looking into how best to raise these funds in a number of ways but ultimately, they will come from the legal community and that is you. It is very easy to make an online donation to BAILII if you go to its website. Please do. It is very quick and it even takes American Express!

AccessToLaw: Major Free Legal Resources

Raising awareness of legal information that is freely available on the web, and facilitating access to it, has always been a primary aim of the Library's gateway site AccessToLaw. Here in the newsletter's regular AccessToLaw feature we usually focus on one section of the site and take a look at the range of entries to be found within it, but it may also be useful from time to time to stand back, look over the site content as a whole, and remind ourselves about some of the major free legal websites and the wealth of content now available on them. The emphasis, in the space available here, will be primarily on sources of UK and EU law.

Most readers will have come across the vast and complex GOV.UK site which was created two years ago and has rapidly expanded since then. Many formerly separate sites, such as those of government departments, have been decommissioned and their content, including many important publications, incorporated into GOV.UK. There is an entry for the site as a whole within AccessToLaw's Government section, but in view of the site's size and complexity, there are also many other entries, within appropriate sections, devoted to specific content of legal interest. Examples of these include entries for the Home Office, the Immigration Rules, the PACE Codes, the Ogden Tables and the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry.

GOV.UK has now become the main general source of government information and services for citizens and businesses, but for practitioners and others seeking specifically legal information there is also the Ministry of Justice's Justice portal. Although some of its former content has been transferred to GOV.UK, it remains an important source for certain material relating to the courts and tribunals, such as guidance documents, hearing lists and procedure rules. As with GOV.UK, we provide entries within appropriate sections of AccessToLaw to specific content, such as Daily Court Lists, the Civil Procedure Rules, the Criminal Procedure Rules and the Family Procedure Rules.

United Kingdom legislation from 1267 to the present, including the legislation of the devolved administrations of Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales, is freely available on the government's Legislation.gov.uk site. UK and Irish legislation, alongside a large collection of court and tribunal cases, may also be freely accessed on BAILII, the website of the British and Irish Legal Information Institute. The site contains around 300,000 searchable documents, within 90 databases, covering 7 jurisdictions.

BAILII is just one of more than forty legal information institutes (LIIs) and other organisations making up the Free Access to Law Movement, dedicated to providing free online access to legislation, cases and other legal information in many parts of the world. Many others merit AccessToLaw entries, amongst them AustLII (Australasia), CanLII (Canada), Cornell LII (United States), HKLII (Hong Kong), NZLII (New Zealand), PacLII (Pacific Islands) and SAFLII (Southern Africa). CommonLII (the Commonwealth) deserves a special mention: besides providing a single location for researching Commonwealth material on various LII sites, it also has an English Reports database, making freely available as pdf page images the English Reports, the reprint of English nominate reports which cover the period 1220 to 1873. And there is also WorldLII, whose search options include a facility for carrying out searches across all of the LII databases.

Reverting to the UK, another large and complex government site containing much legal information is that of the United Kingdom Parliament. There is an entry for the site's main home page, and several other entries directing the user towards specific content such as debates (in the two Houses and in Public Bill Committees), Bills, and information on parliamentary archives.

The last two sites to be mentioned, again very large and complex ones, are concerned with the European Union. Europa is the EU's general portal site, providing a "gateway to the European Union" for accessing information on all areas of its activity, including its publications, membership, history, institutions and laws.

A more direct route to EU legal information alone is provided by EUR-Lex. This site incorporates the EU's comprehensive CELEX database and includes legislation in force, case law 1954 onwards, the Official Journal 1952 onwards, the treaties setting up the European Communities and the European Union, and community preparatory acts.

Facebook

We have had a Facebook page since 2008, keeping followers up to date with the latest news from the Library. Posts include updates from our Current Awareness blog, details of Saturday opening and new acquisitions as well as information on our training sessions. We have recently started adding more items of general interest, such as news and events from the Inn and the local area and law-related broadcasts on TV and radio.

New Acquisitions

The common law constitution (Cambridge, 2014) presents the text of the 2013 Hamlyn Lectures, which were delivered by our own Master Laws (Lord Justice Laws). The lectures explored the constitutional balance between law and government in the United Kingdom.

The author argues that the unifying principle of the constitution is the common law and that its distinctive method has produced profoundly beneficial effects for this country, and goes on to examine two contemporary threats to the constitutional balance: extremism and the effect of Europe-made laws on the domestic system.

Drafting British Virgin Islands trusts by James Kessler QC, Tony Pursall and Naresh Chand (Kluwer), and kindly presented to the Library by Mr Kessler, is a valuable addition to our collection of Commonwealth Caribbean textbooks. It offers an extensive selection of trust precedents to suit a wide range of requirements, and aims to ensure that practitioners prepare accurate and effective trust documents which precisely meet client requirements and reflect the current law and practice. The book is based on Mr Kessler's Drafting trusts and will trusts: a modern approach.

We are indebted to Martin Downs, one of the team of authors, for presenting Same sex marriage and civil partnerships: the new law (Family Law). The authors examine the legal changes introduced by the Civil Partnership Act 2004 and the Marriage (Same Sex Couples) Act 2013, and the rights and responsibilities that are afforded to those who register under the schemes established by the Acts. They also discuss the law as it relates to cohabitants, so that the legislation can be seen in context. They include an analysis of some of the parliamentary debates and, in addition, there is consideration of some wider material for the purpose of evaluating compatibility of the legislation with ECHR rights, bearing in mind the value judgments inherent in the test of proportionality as suggested in Wilson v. First County Trust Ltd. Appendices contain the full text of the 2013 Act and relevant extracts from the 2004 Act.

In addition to those already mentioned, we would like to thank the following members of the Inn who have presented new titles or editions for which they have been responsible, solely or jointly: Master McGregor for McGregor on damages, 19th edition; Master Ong for Costs in international arbitration by Ong and O'Reilly; Anthony Radevsky for Hague's Leasehold enfranchisement, 6th edition; and Anthony Vaughan for Immigration practice and procedure in family proceedings.
